Being gay . . .

Mustang Daily — Alan Kennedy

Cal Poly students deal with being outcasts

For gays at Cal Poly, life is restricted because of poor recognition by straights of gay needs, said Matt, the president of Cal Poly's Gay Students Union recently. Gays do not publicly show their affections for each other at Cal Poly and in San Luis Obispo because of public harassment and ostracism.

"I'd like to go to Tortilla Flats and be affectionate with my lover but it's like the South — black and white aren't supposed to dance together," said the GSU secretary, Sue. (No gay who was contacted for this article wanted their last name used.)

"We used to be more political," Matt said. Members favor the social emphasis now. "The most difficult problem facing the gays is isolation," said Sue. "It's hard to find friends or a job" where one is not exposed to derisive comments.

The term "gay" is often incorrectly used as a melting-pot term for homosexuals, closetted or not, said Matt. "One can be homosexual without being gay. Gay is a way of life," he said. However, GSU prefers not to make a big issue out of being gay, the two officers agreed, "because it is only one facet of our lives."

Although Journey's Inn, a local bar known as a gay meeting place, has a reputation for the best music in town, like any loud bar, "it's not the best place to make friends," Matt said.

Story by Phebe Fletcher

Friends, whether they are gay or not are often cool on campus. "We call it 'guilt by association'; they're afraid of being labeled as gay, so they won't acknowledge you," Matt explained.

"In public I see other people holding hands — and I want to be able to. I've said to myself the only thing stopping me is my fear of what other people think. But we got catcalls from people and passing cars, so we don't. Would you want a lot of people to ridicule you?" Matt asked.

"I'd like to go to Tortilla Flats and be affectionate with my lover, but it's like the South — black and white aren't supposed to dance together."

The Gay Students Union is Cal Poly's and San Luis Obispo County's only gay-oriented organization. A local group, the Gay and Lesbian Alliance, faded out earlier this year, said Sue, as the founders burned out and weren't replaced. The GSU's main purpose, she said, is to provide support and a framework for socializing. Anyone can join," she said, "not just gays."

The GSU limits its fund-raising functions to off campus and has trouble getting support. "If we had a booth at the U.U., who would come to it?" asked Matt. "We had a booth during the Week of Welcome, and there were side comments," he said. There was also a heckler wearing a jock strap filled with peanuts on backwards outside of his clothes, he said.

One difficult problem affecting the public perception of GSU is the campus police crackdown on homosexual encounters in campus bathrooms this year. GSU officers said the crackdown does not affect GSU members but homosexuals who resort to places outside their homes. Wayne Hall, public safety investigator at Cal Poly estimates half the offenders are not even students. "Sometimes they are married without a private place to go, want anonymous sex, or just think it's fun," explained Cal Poly counselor Nancy Jorgenson, who advised the GSU when it was attempting to gain ASI club status between 1974 and 1976.

The problem, said Hall, is others are offended and distressed on discovering the activity and the bathroom is unfairly monopolized. Custodians have to clean up the areas and erase distasteful graffiti, he said. Anti-gay graffiti is increasing, said Matt.

In response the upstairs bathroom in the military science building has been locked up, but now the downstairs one is a problem, said Hall. Men's facilities in the architecture and home economics buildings are also being used for homosexual encounters, he said.

"We've been too lenient — until the end of this summer

Information on gays and their lifestyle is lacking on campus, said Sue. There is gay counseling at the Health Center, but the books in Robert E. Kennedy Library, she said, are outdated, and the Gabby Bookstore downtown is the only store with a gay shelf.

"After I read them," said Sue, "I

"In public, I see other people holding hands and I want to be able to... But we got catcalls from people and passing cars, so we don't. Would you want a lot of people to ridicule you?"

when we made two arrests," said Hall. "We'd interview them and tell them not to return to campus. Now the word is out that this is the place to meet. We'll have to patrol regularly and make arrests in the bathrooms, which is a distasteful duty. We have to get our message across that people are offended, and that alone can be a misdemeanor in a public place," Hall said.

said, "That's funny, I don't feel unhappy or sick — I like the way I am."

There are other support groups, such as the national Parents and Friends of Gays, but locally, said Matt, GSU is the main resource. "We're it," the union's president said.

"You meet friends of friends," said Sue, "it's a geometric progression."

The local college community uses the GSU as an educational source, said Jorgenson. Joan Cirone's Human Sexuality class asks speakers from the GSU to attend an open forum, and Cuesta and Hancock colleges also occasionally ask for speakers, she said.

Cirone said students should "at least be introduced" to the gay perspective. Her aim is to "help individuals make more appropriate choices in life," she said. Students often tell her they still don't approve, but that the class helped them to view gays as people with just a different sexual preference. The class helps dispel myths such as "that to talk with gays would in some way be contagious, or that homosexuals tend to be molesters of children," she said.

"All we do is go home to a person of a different sex; it gets so blown up," said Sue. Matt and Sue agreed they'd like to be freer, like having their last names in print, but after a Mustang Daily article last year, the previous GSU president received a lot of harassing phone calls.

"According to the Kinsey Report, there always have been the same numbers of gays — it's just we're in the public eye more now," Matt said. He said he has found the challenges of coming out are "character-building."

Robert E. Kennedy in order to obtain recognition of its charter. "In the past five or six years it's been more open and free," she said.

"All we do is go home to a person of a different sex; it gets so blown up."

"I couldn't believe this campus was so restrictive," said Jorgenson, who also advised GSU at the time it instituted a lawsuit against then Cal Poly President

"Sometimes, perhaps, there won't be a need for GSU and being gay or heterosexual won't make any difference," she said.

PG&E starts loan

by Katie Sowle
Staff Writer

With ZIP, PG and E will let a homeowner, landlord, or renter borrow up to $3500 to make conservation improvements, without paying interest on the loan.

Pacific Gas and Electric Company has instituted the Zero Interest Program, to help people insulate their homes with the help of loans.

The program began last January in Fresno, and since April 5, ZIP has been offered locally. Last Thursday three demonstration homes in San Luis Obispo, Paso Robles and Santa Maria, insulated to save 40 percent on their winter PG and E bills, were shown.

In San Luis Obispo, homeowner Mario Lombardo opened his newly insulated home to the public for speeches and guided tours. Mendy Wake, PG and E Community Service Representative, said Lombardo's home had been weatherized free of charge to "let people know what ZIP is, and the benefits it can bring."

PG and E District Manager Don Kennedy, said people need control over their utility bills because "in the long run, they're going to go up."

The doors had gaps at the bottom and sides. In addition to being re-hung, they needed new jams and weatherstripping over the entire frame. All windows were also weatherstripped, plus caulked.

For ceiling insulation, the crawl hole into the attic was removed, and the insulation blown in through the hole.

As for the water heater, Anderson called it the second largest energy user in a house. "It is one of the most important to insulate, and the least expensive," she added.

Constellation, planets seen through aided eye

On a clear night you can see forever.

That's the hope of astronomy students and instructors as they begin an open house of the Physics Department's telescopes.

Two telescopes are open to anyone interested in viewing the moon, planets and constellations Tuesday and Thursday nights from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. fall quarter. The telescopes are located between the E and D wing of the Science building.

According to physics instructor Joseph Boone, the best time to view the constellations will be Oct. 21 through Oct. 26.

"The moon will be out and it's good to go when the moon's up," he said.

Other objects Boone suggests viewing are double stars (two stars that orbit one another), stars of different colors, gas clouds and other planets.

Guides will be stationed at the telescopes, said Boone. "If people will ask, they (the guides) can point out the different constellations at that time, show some of the various interesting astronomical objects there."

Sports

Close thriller, 14-13

The unfair last second

by Dave Wilcox
Staff Writer

Put away the black armbands, it's only a game. Sure, the Mustangs came, oh, so close to upsetting the fifth-ranked Division II team in the nation. OK, so the best team, at least Saturday night, didn't win. Some things in this crazy world just aren't fair.

You don't lose 'em tougher than Cal Poly did to Northern Colorado before a standing, screaming, and finally stunned partisan crowd at Mustang Stadium. It wasn't the first, or last, time a team had its heart broken on the final play of the game, but Cal Poly so badly outplayed the Bears that you would have never thought the game could have been this close.

But it was. Instead of the Mustangs applying the finishing touches on a rout, Northern Colorado quarterback Nick Henkowski scrambled into the corner of the end zone as time expired to erase a 13-8 deficit and steal the Bears a 14-13 victory.

Evidence of thievery can be found in the game's final statistics. That the Bears scored at all is something of a miracle. Before that fateful last-minute 80-yard drive, the Mustang defense had held Northern Colorado to a net total offense of minus 33 yards. Where's the justice?

On top of that, the Cal Poly offense virtually exploded compared to its meager output in the last few games, piling up 267 yards. Workhorse Brian Gutierrez gained 177 yards on 33 carries and halfback Rick Cramer added 62 yards.

The first half ended with Poly on top 7-0, thanks to an 11 play, 56-yard drive that culminated with Tracy Biller connecting on a third down scoring strike to Damone Johnson. Cramer picked up 27 yards in the drive.

Biller, who finished the night completing eight of 19 passes for 74 yards and two big interceptions, might have directed the Mustangs to another score before intermission had his receivers used a bit more stickum. After outside linebacker Jerry Schmidt fell on Bear running back Jim Bright's fumble at the Mustang's 36, Poly drove to midfield for a first down. On second and eight, Biller hit Johnson between the two eights he wears but he couldn't hang on. On third down, Clarence Martin was the culprit, although the ball was a bit behind him it was still catchable.

Through three series of downs in the third quarter both sides went on an emotional roller-coaster ride with most of the action involving UNC safety, Randy McCall.

The third quarter follies started with UNC punter Don Geist allowing the snap to skip through his legs and roll into the end zone. Seemingly through sleight-of-hand he escaped a sure safety and kicked the ball to the 28 yardline. Failing to capitalize on their great field position (they went backwards five yards) Mustang Steve Arrellano punted the ball almost straight up, hoping to land it inside the 20.

The ball took a Bear bounce and the alert McCall snagged it out of the air and sprinted away from the surprised Mustangs for what looked like a touchdown. But hold the phone, the officials said a fair catch had been signaled making any advancement of the ball illegal. You could almost hear the Mustangs bench heave a sigh of relief.

With the Mustangs defense now out there to contend with, the Bears were going nowhere except backwards, again. A 12 yard punt return by Poly free safety Nick Frost plus a facemask penalty against the Bears and the Mustangs were once again within striking distance on the UNC 36 yardline. But on second and nine from the 23, that pesky McCall appeared again, picking off a Biller pass in the flat and, with nothing but some Cal Poly running back Brian Gutierrez is held suspended atop a Northern Colorado defensive line Saturday night. That's how the Mustangs felt in the last second of the game, losing an, oh, so heartbreaking one, 14-13.

A pipe dream, staying with Amy

"Amie, what you wanna do? I think I could stay with you, for a while, maybe longer if I do...." —Pure Prairie League, 1976.

Well, if you do stay with this particular Amy in 1982, you'd be in the elite. Not too many folks have been able to stay with Amy Harper on a 5,000-meter cross country course this year. Although the names may be spelled differently, Amy the runner may very well be as popular as 'Amie' the song by year's end.

In fact, only a trio of some 600 runners in four previous races have crossed the finish line in front of Harper, the top runner for Cal Poly's women's cross country squad. All three are from Stanford, the top Division I team in the nation. And all three did it two weeks ago in the Stanford Invitational.

Harper returned from that fourth-place finish at Stanford, to simply shatter the course record Saturday morning in the 2nd Annual Cal Poly-SLO Invitational. Harper toured the course out by the Crop Science Unit in 16:45, 11 seconds ahead of last year's winning time by former Mustang Eileen Kraemer.

"After the first mile I needed to pick up the pace a little," said the junior from San Jose. "I went out a little slow the first mile to see if it would make a difference in the middle of my race. The second mile was faster and I think the third mile was a little faster. I'm a little surprised about my time. Last year here I ran somewhere in the late seventeens."

"I broke away to see if I felt good. I wasn't that tired. I wanted to see if I could keep going fast. I just surged and carried it through. We worked out for two weeks on the course, but this was only the second time I ran it for time. I wasn't sure how I would run on this course after being tired. But I like it now."

A lot of people have liked what Harper has been doing this season. But her success so far in 1982 is no fluke. She's not just a flash in the pan. She is also no overnight sensation. Like the saying goes, "The only time success comes before work is in the dictionary." This is true for Harper. She's paid her dues.

"I'm in a lot better shape this year than I have ever been," Harper said. "In the summer I trained really hard, as opposed to any other summer. I ran 12 miles a day, everyday."

This, even for a runner, can get rather boring. But Harper broke up the monotony quite well. After going to summer school in San Jose, she and some friends, also runners, traveled to Tahoe for the remainder of the summer.

"I ran six miles in the morning, went to work, and ran six miles later in the afternoon," she said. "That broke it up quite a bit. It was hard to put in all those miles. Sometimes I was wondering why I was doing all of that. I wanted to see if I could have a good

Women's team struts its No. 1 stuff, while men discover it's Miller time

The Cal Poly women's cross country proved once again Saturday morning why it is ranked No. 5 in the nation in Division I and No. 1 in Division II.

Led by junior Amy Harper for the fourth consecutive meet, the Mustang women scored a mere 21 points in winning the Cal Poly-SLO Invitational for the second year in a row. UC Berkeley, a Division I team, was a distant second with 53 points. Cal State Northridge, a Division II team, took third with 83.

Harper shattered the course record with her 16:45 clocking. It broke the one-year-old mark set by former Mustang runner Eileen Kraemer. Placing second in the race was Mustang junior Carol Gleason at 17:19.

The Cal Poly men's team took second behind a team called Miller Time, also known as the Mustang alumni. The alumni were led by Ivan Huff, who set a course record of 29:05 with his win. Miller Time tallied 35 points, while the Cal Poly team, running intact for just the second time of the season, scored 49.

Leading the Mustang attack was Hector Perez. He placed third overall with a 29:48 time. Carmello Rios finished sixth overall and second on the Poly team in 29:56.

The rest of the men's results for the Mustangs were: Kevin Broady (11th, 30:04); Mike Lansdon (15th, 30:19); John Rembau (17th, 30:26); Steve Cubillas (18th, 30:41); Steve Strangio (19th, 30:47); Sal Lozano (19th, 30:47); Ken Ellingboe (7th, 17:30); Lori Lopez (23rd, 31:07); Julio Soto (24th, 31:10); Roman DeSoto (27th, 31:35); Jim McCarthy (31st, 31:46); Steve Whitcomb (40th, 32:46); and Phil Sosa (51st, 33:48). Rembau and the final six listed runners ran for the Poly "B" team.

The rest: Jennifer Jameson (TC, 19th, 18:13); Sheri McCarroll (TC, 23rd, 18:23); Claudia Morlang (TCB, 27th, 18:36); Kris Katterhagen (TC, 30th, 18:41); Rhonda Patcha (TC, 32nd, 18:48); Marlene Haverty (TCB, 33rd, 18:53); Kathy Kelly (TC, 34th, 18:55); Sheri Ewing (TCB, 38th, 19:07); Gay McClenathan (TCB, 40th, 19:12); Judy Peters (TCB, 42nd, 19:28).

Both teams now have two weeks off until the NCAA Region 8 Qualifying Meet Oct. 30 in Riverside. The Division II National Championships is Nov. 13 at St. Cloud State in St. Cloud, Minnesota.

For the "A" team: Nov. 13 at St. Cloud State in St. Cloud, Minnesota. For the "B" team: Nov. 13 at St. Cloud State in St. Cloud, Minnesota. —Mike Mathison torn-up sod ahead of him, raced 79 yards for a touchdown no one could call back. But that's not the end. The extra point attempt was bobbled and holder Henkowski scrambled around, finally spotting offensive tackle Reese Freeman for two points and an 8-7 Bear lead.

The Mustang offense, not wanting to let their Superman defense down, took the ensuing kickoff and drove from their own 16 to the Bears four, where they had first and goal. But on the 17th play of the march, third and goal from the two, Cramer was tripped for no gain by, you guessed it, McCall, and Rick Breneman, who had earlier missed his first field goal of the season, connected this time on a 19 yard boot, putting the Mustangs back on top, 10-8.

After four downs saw the Bears move backwards once again, the Mustangs parlayed their next possession into another three points, these coming off the toe of David Croteau from 44 yards out. The Mustangs were on top 13-8 with 4:55 left with a defense stingier than Mr. Scrooge. And when Schmidt sacked Henkowski for an 11 yard loss on third and ten with 2:50 remaining, Poly's upset hopes were becoming reality.

But the Mustangs could only hold on to the pigskin for a little over a minute before surrendering it back to the Bears for a final shot at keeping their national ranking.

Two Henkowski passes to wide receiver Kim Boerma quickly moved the ball to the Bears 41. Then tight end Jim Curran gathered in a pass good for a first down at the Mustang's 49. With 21 seconds left and first and ten from Poly's 36, Henkowski lofted a bomb in Boerma's direction at the six yardline. The ball fell to earth untouched, but the yellow flag meant trouble for the Mustangs, as freshman Keenan Stanely was called for pass interference. The Mustangs thwarted two passes by Henkowski before the quarterback decided it himself.

Middle game is middle name in volleyball win

by Mike Mathison
Staff Writer

FRESNO -- The Cal Poly women's volleyball team has been missing something from its attack the past few weeks -- the middle game.

Both offensively and defensively the Mustangs have been lacking a bit in the middle. And it had Head Coach Mike Wilton concerned.

But Saturday night in the Main Gymnasium the middle game revisited the Mustang attack. And that's what did-in visiting San Jose State. Spearheaded by 6-foot-2 senior middle blocker Wendy Hooper, Poly downed the red-hot Spartans, 15-12, 15-17, 15-6, 15-9. The win snapped an eight-match San Jose State win streak.

"Obviously, they came to play," Wilton said about the Spartans, who fell to 12-5. "They have a lot of confidence in themselves. We hurt them in the middle. On offense we pretty-much did whatever we wanted in the middle at will. And at the same time we stuffed their middle pretty good."

The win raises the Mustangs' record to 15-4. But they cannot rest on their laurels. Tonight Poly is here in Fresno ready to take on the Bulldogs -- and the Red Wave. The Bulldogs are a fair volleyball team on the road. But, at home, it's a different story. The Red Wave is the Fresno State fans. And they're crazy. When the Bulldogs are playing at home, it's a definite home-court advantage. It took Pacific four games to beat Fresno State and the Red Wave earlier in the year.

"You definitely have to have your head screwed on right when you go to Fresno," Wilton said. "After Fresno we play USC on Friday and Cal State Fullerton on Saturday (both on the road). It'll be tough for us from here on out. The team will have many opportunities to rise to the top. Last night (Saturday) was a positive step for them in realizing that."

Hooper's hitting returned to action after a brief two-match hiatus. After fair hitting performances versus UC Santa Barbara and UOP, Hooper pounded down 23 of her 41 sets. She also had seven service aces and five total blocks. Sophomore super-sub Stacy Stowell came off the bench to perform her magic once again. Stowell connected on 10-of-19 kill-attempts. Freshman Lynn Kessler was nine-for-19, senior Tina Taylor five-for-seven. Having a rough night was junior Sandy Aughinbaugh who was 14-for-56. Defensively, junior Randi Alvari and sophomore Terri Purling each had five defensive saves. Purling also had four service aces.

"Wendy played a very nice match for us," Wilton said. "We need her to do that more often. And Stacy played tremendous once again. She helped out where we needed it. This time it was at the middle blocker position. Everybody contributed here and there."

What Wilton didn't like about the match was the similarities with the Pacific Match the Mustangs lost in four games (Oct. 8). In the match with the Tigers, Poly had numerous opportunities to put UOP away early, but never did. In game one Saturday night, the Mustangs led 14-7, only to have the gap closed to 14-12, before they won it. In game two, Poly held a 13-7 advantage, but lost 17-15.

"There was a very definite scenario in each game with the UOP match," Wilton said. "Three-quarters of the way through the game we had a convincing lead only to let them off the hook. We closed them off in game one, but let them all the way off the hook in game two. In games three and four we had success keeping the lid on."

That's something the Mustangs better do tonight. They better not let the Red Wave blow the roof off the gym.

Or it could be a long bus ride home.

For Amy Harper, records are weekends away cross country season if I trained in the summer. The rest of my cross country seasons were decent and I hardly trained in the summer.

"I ran a lot by myself, which was hard a lot of the time. And I ran the same place every day. But while I was running I was always thinking of the reason why I was training so hard. I'm doing better than I expected. I'm finally running with people which has helped. Trying to run hard workouts by yourself is tough because there's no one there to compare yourself to."

This was no snap decision for Harper. It's not like she woke up in the middle of the night and said, 'Hey, I think I'll train hard to see how I do.' Harper had a slight kick in the pants which got her to train so hard during the summer. It happened last spring during track season.

"I started training really hard in the early season," said Harper, who runs the 1,500- and 3,000-meters during track season. "I ran a lot more miles. I started to run on Sunday and I ran every morning. I ran an extra 15 miles a week just from the morning runs. That made a lot of difference."

It made Harper a smash on the track. She had the number two times in both the 1,500- and 3,000-meters. Both times she was behind Kraemer. Harper's 3,000-meter time was 9:39.1. But it was the 1,500 where Harper earned her reputation. In the Division II National Championships, Harper lost to Kraemer in the 1,500 by .01-seconds. It was known Harper had talent. This just proved the assumption.

And she has carried the winning tradition from track into cross country season. Harper is a main reason why Lance Harper's women are ranked No. 5 in the nation in Division I and No. 1 in the country in Division II. But Harper doesn't do it alone. Like she said before, now she has people to run against in workouts. And Harper has folks to show her no mercy in workouts. Not far behind Harper on the team, in no particular order, are Carol Gleason, Lori Lopez, Jennifer Dunn, Marilyn Nichols, Inga Thompson and Robyn Dubach.

In the four meets this season, Harper has broken course records at Riverside

Sports

I Don't Wanna
SHAWN TURNER

Please don't tell 'em I said it

They're called Garbage Sports—rugby, rodeo and lacrosse. But only by me, and only under my breath or safely aloud behind my desk in the newsroom. Never, never to the faces of the participants.

You are the only one who knows.

The athletes just wouldn't understand the term, or the innocuous way in which it is used. You see, if there is one thing journalists are good at—and there probably is only one thing—it's giving names to things making them more identifiable, more personal. Reaganomics. Chocolate Thunder. Koreagate. Beatnik. Hooooop.

That is the way Garbage Sports came about. There are just enough Cal Poly teams this fall to be covered one-on-one by the sports staff. Some have been assigned. Others have been taken from my power-and-glory hands with such parting comments as, "I've got volleyball and you have no choice." So much for leadership.

All of them, though, were snapped up like free beer compared to what was left, the portion I got. They were taken up like wheat from the chaff or goodies from the—garbage.

That's all the name implies, nothing more. The sports are, of course, far from garbage.

In fact, I chose rodeo, telling myself I had no choice but to assign it to me. Why exactly I like rodeo I couldn't tell you. I just do. Maybe because it's vastly different from any other sport. Maybe because I have always longed to be a rancher and know it's a laughable dream.

And maybe because I'm a little defiant. It's fun to tell someone I like rodeo and watch the word "Hick" form on his lips. Fun for me, anyway—I'm easily amused.

Rugby and lacrosse are different dilemmas entirely. I didn't ask for them, but while I've got them I'm trying to make do. The athletes and I share a common bond—misunderstanding. I can't quite understand them when they explain the game to me—come on, I grew up on a Little League baseball so how am I going to right off the bat (nice cliché) know these strange sports? And they can't understand why the paper sent such a hollow-headed person to cover their pride and joy.

I'm learning. May 6.

All three garbage sports have much in common. Underlying each of them is a toughness so tough it's scary. In football—not to belittle that sport—break an arm and you are out. Break an arm in rodeo, as then-Team Captain Thomas Switzer did last year, and you figure out a way of playing despite it.

Patrick O'Haren, in charge of publicity for the Rugby Club, says his sport is one of finesse, and I believe him. But you need something more to want to slam full-bodied into another person—toughness is a good something. Some of those guys have what looks like tree trunks for legs, and Charles Bronson smiles.

Lacrosse is just as tough, comically offset by the Ivy League names the team members address each other—Scotty, Bobby. To want to run broken field into a bunch of people wielding sticks, you have to have a little more than the desire to run.

They also share problems with publicity—they don't get much. When the lacrosse club gets any, it is either wrong, they say, or the club is mistaken for an intramural venture. Rugby players are politely insistent, calling us up before an interview to make sure we're coming.

Rodeo club members like good publicity if some comes their way, talking easily about their sport, punctuating their speech with "darn sure" and "son of a buck." They're slow to anger if you get something wrong, but when you do, they really uncork.

So I imagine myself as the Angel of Publicity, a little bungling, trying to make sense out of these sports that confuse my unfamiliar ears. I'm working on it, slowly, slowly. By the time their seasons are over, I'll have mastered the sports, revealing the good of these garbage sports.

May 6.

Darn sure.

and Cal Poly. In San Diego, she won the race with the best time in Mustang history on the course. And at Stanford in placing fourth, Harper established another Cal Poly course best. "The Stanford meet is the best meet except for the TAC (The Athletic Congress) Nationals (held in New Jersey Nov. 27). It was really good for me to run at Stanford because the competition at the Division II Nationals will not be like it was at Stanford."

It's no secret the nation's best competition is in Division I in cross country. But Harper and teammates won't be facing any of that caliber until the TAC meet. The Mustangs have a chance to rest from competition until the NCAA Region 8 Qualifying Meet Oct. 30 in Riverside. The Division II Nationals is Nov. 13 at St. Cloud State in St. Cloud, Minn. Two weeks after that is TAC.

"I'll work hard for another three weeks, and then start tapering off a little before nationals," Harper said. "I want to run well at nationals. But I want to run my best at TAC. I want my best race to be the last race of the year. In the past it's been that my best race is the race before the last race of the year. I don't want that to happen this year."

Well, if history will repeat itself, so far in 1982, whatever Amy Harper has wanted, Amy Harper has gotten.

This should be no different.

Proposition 12: the nuclear freeze initiative

Editor's note: The following are the letters the Mustang Daily has received to date concerning Proposition 12 on the November 2 ballot. Letters on propositions 11 and 15, the only other ballot initiatives letters have dealt with, will appear at a later date.

Editor:

If history teaches us anything it's that we don't learn much from history. It also teaches us that we rarely create armaments we don't eventually use.

Einstein warned that "the unleashed power of the atom has changed everything except our ways of thinking. Thus we are drifting toward a catastrophe beyond comparison. We shall require a substantially new manner of thinking if mankind is to survive."

Most scientists will tell you that we now have enough nuclear bombs to blow up the world several times over. Numerous physicians have testified to the horrendous medical consequences for millions of our population if a nuclear war were to occur. Child psychologists, pediatricians, and clergy have noted that much of the despair and hesitancy to work toward future goals experienced by adolescents reflects their lack of faith that there will even be a future.

What's most frustrating for us is the attitude, shared by both superpowers, that we're the white hats and you other guys are the problem. It's like the spouse who comes in for marriage counseling saying "I've told you my side of the problem; now let me tell you his."

Proposition 12, California's Freeze Initiative, is a beginning. It simply asks that the United States and Russia agree to halt the production, testing, and installment of nuclear weapons under conditions that can be checked by both sides.

Local physicians, clergy, and psychologists are among those sponsoring a Festival for the Freeze at Santa Rosa Park on Saturday, October 23rd, from two until five that afternoon. International recording artist Mary Macgregor, a past president of the American Psychological Association, and local musicians and speakers will be on hand.

We invite you to join us at the Festival and urge you to support Proposition 12.

Dr. Steve Brody, Psychologist
Rev. James Stewart, Minister
Dr. Lou Tedone, Physician

Editor:

Recently I was talking to my roommates about the Bilateral Nuclear Weapons Freeze, or what is also known as Proposition 12. To my amazement I found out that they believed the whole issue was just as good as dead. Well, being the person I am, and also being a political science major, I took up the debate. My roommates' argument was that the Soviet and U.S. governments have been trying for years to come to some rational settlement on this issue and that it never leads anywhere. To my amazement again, they were somewhat correct!!

But that is not the real topic concerning the initiative. This is an action that is in the hands of the California voters. We are sending a message to the present administration that the people of America want and demand the halting of procurement and deployment of all nuclear weapons in both the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

Finally, the American public are trying to make decisions on nuclear weapons, decisions that we probably thought we could never make in the first place. It is a start in the right direction and that is the topic concerning Prop. 12. I will leave it up to you on how you vote on this issue, but when you think about it there is really only one way to vote on Prop. 12. Who knows, it just might start something in the way of a peaceful resolution to this ominous subject.

Proposition 12

Editor:

It is time for a hard look at the Nuclear Freeze, otherwise known as Proposition 12 on next month's ballot. Obviously, whatever the voters say will not bind the Reagan Administration (much less the Russians) to anything, but it will send a powerful political message, one way or the other, for Reagan and the congress to keep in mind.

Are we or the Russians ahead in the nuclear-arms race, and just what does it mean to be "ahead" when counting hydrogen bombs? The total number of "strategic" warheads is roughly equal, with each side having roughly nine thousand - count 'em, nine thousand - ready to go if Gabriel's trump blows. If you count megatons instead of bombs, the Russians are well ahead, and in particular their land-based ICBMs carry about three times the explosive yield that ours can sling. This is very much stressed by those who tremble for fear that the Reds are just waiting to nail us. Only a couple of minor points are lost to this view. One is that big bombs are less efficient than little ones - "kill radius" goes up roughly as the cube root of total yield. Our missiles carry smaller bombs for the same reason that the Army's M-16 rifles fire smaller bullets - they're handier, cheaper, and will kill you every bit as dead. The other is that the Russians depend much more on their ICBMs than we do on ours - they have nothing like our bomber force, and their nuclear subs, though numerous, are unreliable, noisy (and therefore easy to find), and mostly sit in port.

In totalling up the nuclear balance, it should also be kept in mind that the USSR is very much more vulnerable than we are. Practically the whole Russian political, educational, and cultural elite is concentrated in the one city of Moscow. The only land link between European Russia and its vast, strategic Siberian territories is a single railroad track. Even a little bitty "tactical" bomb should be enough to derail the trains. The Russian penchant for a few giant factories also leaves their industrial power concentrated in a relative handful of targets. For instance, there are only about two dozen major oil refineries in the whole USSR. As shattering as the devastation of even a "limited" nuclear war would be, we have much greater recovery powers than they do. (The Reagan Administration's civil-defense chief has claimed that our GNP would recover from a nuclear war in as little as four years. This is faster than it is likely to recover from Reaganomics.)

Given our practical superiority in any plausible scenario, why have Reagan and company whipped up such a hysteria? One reason is that the corporate crowd he fronts for, unable to hack it in the rough competitive world of civilian production, smells fat profits to be made at the taxpayers' expense by building weapons. Another more basic reason may be their great need to convince themselves (and the rest of us) that all our problems in the world are due to those nasty Russians, and not to our own long record of backing and bankrolling right-wing losers from Chang kai-Chek, Batista, and Thieu on up to the Shah, Galtieri, and the generals in El Salvador.

There is no way for American voters to send a message to the Kremlin, but the Soviets have enough troubles with unreliable Poland and truculent Afghanistan, not to mention their own wheezy economy, to keep them from planning world conquest. We can, however, send a strong message to Reagan to quit hiding behind Cold War rhetoric and get on with practical solutions to our economic and political problems. Vote YES on Proposition 12, the Nuclear Freeze Initiative.
